Honors Physics BCR: Force And Work? When you load a heavy box into a truck, it is often easier to push it up a ramp to the back of the truck than to light it directly up into the truck. However, the change in the gravitational potential of the box is the same no matter how you get it from the ground into the truck.

I'm a junior in high school taking honors physics and need advice. Math and science are my strongest subjects, but I am horrible at honors physics. Biology, chemistry, and precalc were all easy, but for some reason physics is insanely hard. I've failed both of my first tests but still have a low B because I do fine on the quizzes. I constantly study the material but always bomb the tests.
