Cat owners should always be on the lookout for eye problems. Unlike dogs, who use a combination of sight, hearing and smell to become familiar with their surroundings, cats depend mostly on their eyesight for hunting and stalking their prey. Watery eyes, frequent blinking, squinting, and pawing at ...

Signs Your Cat May Have Eye Problems | PetHelpful

Cats have an inner, third eyelid, called a nictating membrane (also spelled "nictitating"), which serves to protect the eye from dryness and/or damage. When a cat is sick, the third eyelid will partially close which is a signal to get him to the vet immediately if other symptoms present.
