Introverts are an anomaly to many because we don't wear our emotions on our sleeve. We keep our greatest treasures hidden, secretly hoping that the right person will have the map to unlock the gates to our heart. I have the map, dearest. Today I'm sharing 8 ways to make an introvert fall in love.

How to Make an Introvert Fall in Love - Introvert Spring

Introverts need quiet time with those we love. We are quiet, but the voice in our heads is very loud. Sometimes loving us is simply respecting the quiet we need to function. We don't need the air full of words to feel love. We just need you with us, quietly there allowing us to be authentic.

10 Things About Love Only Introverts Would Understand

An introvert in love is looking for someone whom they can be silent with, with whom space doesn't feel empty even if you aren't speaking. Spending a quiet rainy day in bed, reading, making love, watching their favourite TV show is all they want. A partner that can respect this is a partner that introverts will be able to feel synchronicity ...

Introverts. The flip side of introverts' sensitivity to dopamine is that they need less of it to feel happy. Extroverts' brains run on an energy-spending nervous system, whereas introverts' brains run on an energy-conserving nervous system. This is why introverts feel content and energized when reading a book, thinking deeply,...
