This book made me wish I was already dead. I read Jesus' son by Denis Johnson & greatly enjoyed it. This book left me frustrated and dismayed. I couldn't follow the story, I didn't feel the characters were developed enough. I really had no feelings or interest for any of the characters in the book.

A kinky jeremiad about drug culture burnout (and fallout), powered by amusingly feverish images of California-as-Armageddon, from the poet and author whose recent fiction includes Jesus' Son (1992) and Resuscitation of a Hanged Man (1991). Johnson's latest is composed of a series of linked narratives set along the northern California coast in 1990/91, and centered in the psychic unraveling of ...
