America is an active simulation of ideas, so history is irrelevant to America. Baudrillard wrote this in 80s Reagan America, more or less the perfect time to have these sorts of ideas. They are themselves naive in various ways, which I think is counterbalanced by E Unibus Pluram and various fringe elements.

Review: "America" by Jean Baudrillard. America: the "brutally naïve," informally conformist "centre of the world," the egalitarian (which I beg to differ) and the indifferent (which I think depends almost entirely upon the locale) — Americans: the last "primitive" people, in part because they lack awareness of their own simulations,...

"America is the original version of modernity. We are the dubbed or subtitled version. America ducks the question of origins; it cultivates no origin or mythical authenticity; it has no past and no founding truth. Having known no primitive accumulation of time, it lives in a perpetual present." — Jean Baudrillard, América
