Roland Barthes' "The Death of the Author" is a critical evaluation of how he deems a piece of writing should be evaluated. An overwhelming component of his argument is the subject of power; the power of the author versus the power of the reader and how they interact.

The Power of the Reader in Barthes' "The Death of the Author"

The Death of the Author. Barthes' articulation of the death of the author is a radical and drastic recognition of this severing of authority and authorship. Instead of discovering a "single 'theological' meaning (the 'message' of the Author-God)", readers of a text discover that writing, in reality, constitutes "a multi-dimensional space",...

The Eiffel Tower, and Other Mythologies. Accused of being "a geyser of pishposh" and "famous for remarks which mean nothing," and acclaimed as "one of the foremost literary critics in France" and "a brilliant polemicist, a formidable rhetorician, an ingenious, mercurial man of letters," Roland Barthes has indeed had a significant impact on...

The Eiffel Tower, and Other Mythologies Analysis - eNotes.com

Myth, according to Roland Barthes in 'Myth Today' (in Mythologies) does not reside in the simple denotational meaning of signs. With myth being a secondary system of signification in which the sign becomes a signifier, that process of signification takes the meaning of symbols in the myth to the realm of association, not denotation.
