2391 sample questions: 2391 exam preparation

I took the 2391 on 16th March along with many others who post on this site. I practised all the questions on 7 different papers and sample papers my lecturer compiled. I was pleased with my answers and estimated i was getting somewhere in the region of 75-90%. After reading the first few questions in the exam I realised how much time I had wasted.

I agree with the answer of just calculating the resistance to see if it complies. This is a common thing in the 2391 and something to look out for, you start to think 'my god I can't remember the disconnection times what shall I do'. But what the question really is saying is 'if the fault current is 120A what is the Zs and is it less than 2.4'.
